SSSSB Story 055a – The Land Without a Minister of Schools (for children aged 5–9)

Once upon a time, there was a land with a king and a queen.
They needed someone to make decisions about the schools.

But there was one important rule: this person had to have attended an SSSSB class before.

The king and queen asked all the people in the country to search for such a person.

They searched everywhere, from one side of the land to the other.
Some walked, some rode bicycles or scooters, some rode horses, some went by car, and some even flew in a helicopter or traveled by boat.

But there was no SSSSB class and no SSSSB student to be found.

After three days, the people came back tired and a little sad.

The king and queen said: “In our country there is no one from an SSSSB class. We must find an SSSSB member from another country.”

They asked a special team to write down all the SSSSB classes in the world, together with the names of all their family members, in a big book.

When the book was ready, the king and queen opened it.
And yes... there was also your name! ✨

💡 Question of the Day Imagine you were chosen to decide everything at school.
What would you change...

- In the classroom?
- On the playground?
- In the garden or play area?
- During gym class?

And what do you think is most important for all children?
(Be kind, play fair, learn together, eat healthy, etc.)
